Which type of reproduction leads to increased genetic variation on a population?

A. Parthenogenesis

B. asexual reproduction

C. Sexual reproduction

D. Vegetative reproduction

Answer

C. Sexual reproduction

During sexual reproduction, the genetic information from each parent is combined and reorganized to provide a unique new individual. This process introduces genetic variation into a population.